

Mike Marino Named Among the Denver Business Journal's 2019
'Who's Who in Energy'

The Denver Business Journal (DBJ) has just released their list of "Who's Who in Energy" for 2019 and have included Well Master's CEO Mike Marino among the top Colorado business leaders.

Mike will be honored at their Dec. 5th event at the Brown Palace Hotel where those listed will mingle with DBJ energy reporters, including Greg Avery, about issues the industry is currently facing in Colorado.

Mr. Marino joined Well Master as Vice President in 2012 after serving as Chief Operating Officer for a Global Equipment Manufacturer based in Golden, CO. In July of 2013 Mike was appointed President and Chief Operating Officer of Well Master Corporation. Mike is known for leadership in optimizing operations resulting in maximized performance and profitability. He is also respected for his capability to guide technical aspects of business while leading people, products and processes with an entrepreneurial spirit.

Mike has a unique combination of specialized advanced technical knowledge and business experience able to deliver dramatic growth supported by unrivaled career progression with history of success at all levels. Mike is experienced in a variety of environments from global, multi-national organizations to small and mid-sized businesses owned by private equity firms. He has a reputation of responding to operational and financial challenges with resourcefulness, determination and focus. Mike earned his Bachelors and Masters of Science degrees in Industrial Engineering from Pennsylvania State University. He is a loyal alumnus and serves on several advisory boards within the University.

Throughout the last 5 years Mike has helped lead Well Master into the future and continues to push the company to become change makers and industry leaders in all areas. We are so proud of Mike's hard work and dedication to Well Master and are excited to see where he leads us in the years to come!
